listed quicker and easier. And also, you can increase your link popularity through ongoing classified ads, and high PR sites give the best links and no cost traffic.

The Ad Headline is Crucial- In reality, your headline will be the most important part of your entire ad. Why? Because unless it does its job, the rest of your ad cannot get its job done either. The headline essentially has two jobs; to target your audience and to get them to click on your ad. Use a benefit oriented approach, and immediately tell what problem you solve or what benefit you offer. Also, attempt to employ powerful, attention grabbing lingo.

Benefit Oriented Copy- Many people do not understand the keys to professional web copy development, but you can easily master the art of writing great ads with one simply technique. Always think in terms of the rewards that will be gained by your prospect from clicking on the link to your website, page, blog, or affiliate link. Remember, most folks out there are not interested in you, but they ARE definitely interested in what you have that can benefit THEM.

Be the Boss- It seems so simple that it can often be overlooked, but a simple call to action has been proven time and again to lead to more of whatever action you are trying to get. In the case of classified advertisements, you are trying to get the readers of your ad to click on your link to visit your site. So, tell them to do exactly that. "Click the link for more FREE info!" is a simple example of a call to action that can get more people to visit your site... giving you more traffic.
